CHAPTER 1 Not disclaimer: I own this. I own the whole plot and all the characters. I'm kinda nervous so if there is anything I need to work on, Just tell me. Enjoy!

Baby Reese watched in fascination as the markings covering her arms and legs glowed a brilliant white the closer she got to the window. The baby, out of curiosity, crawled as fast as her little legs could carry her to the transparent solid. She pressed her tiny hands to the smooth, cool glass. Enjoying the coolness, she squirmed to get better access to the window. Her mother, walked into the room to feed Reese and scooped her up, not seeing the glowing light.

FIFTEEN YEARS LATER.

Reese's parents had called her downstairs to talk to her. As she walked down the staircase, she wondered what they wanted to talk to her about. _I'm probably in trouble for something my sister did. _She thought with a sigh. Then she realized she was at the bottom and hurried through the door to meet them. When she looked at their faces, they didn't look angry, but they looked almostâ€¦ anxious. She sat down on the couch. She looked at them expectantly. "Wellâ€¦ umm." Her father stuttered. "Spit it out!" Said Reese. "You're going to public school!" Her mom blurted. Reese looked at her parents suspiciously. "This is a joke. Right?"

So, it turns out, they weren't joking. Reese had butterflies in her stomach doing acrobatic tricks. You see, Reese had been homeschooled all her life. What if people teased her? _No. Never again. _She thought darkly. Her last friend was a boy. She had thought he really truly liked her for who she was. He said the only reason they were friends was because of a dare. She was heartbroken. She actually liked him as a friend. she wished it wasn't an act, that it was real. But that would have been to good to be true. She sighed contentedly at the good memories, and tried to push the bad ones out. All in all? Life sucked, big time. "Reese! Get your butt up and out here!" She sighed. That was her cue to stop daydreaming and get to school. This was her first day of actual school, but it had started a week ago. She didn't know why her parents even bothered. She missed a whole week of a new school and to top that off, She never went to a public school. What were her parents thinking! Were they crazy or something? She sighed, Reese and her mom had gone shopping for new school clothes just five days ago. So she had a backpack, and everything else that she needed for high school. She looked at her backpack like it was a disease. Then, with a sigh of defeat, she walked down the stairs and out the door.
